

Description

XCB-105 Adamagan (Aleut for place of walrus hunters) is at the head of Morzhovoi Bay, western Alaska Peninsula. It is a massive village with multiple occupations. When it was occupied 400 BCE-100 CE, it was the largest village in the Arctic with an estimated 1000 people. It also has limited occupations dated 2200-1700 BCE, 1000-600 BCE, and 900-1100 CE.

The Western Alaska Peninsula artifacts are presented as a result of the research conducted under grants NSF 9630072, NSF 9814086, NSF 9996372, NSF 9996415, NSF 1139266, NSF 1321411. H. Maschner, Principal Investigator.

Specifications

Country: United States of America

Region: Alaska

Site: Western Alaska Peninsula (various sites)

Material: Stone

Age: Antiquity

Provenance: Western Alaska Peninsula (various sites)

Digitization method: Photogrammetry/Laser Scanner

Model URL: <https://gdh.org/model/hafted-knife-xcb-105-1043/>